Mission and Goals

The Spanish program is designed to provide students with the special knowledge, skills, and pedagogy needed to enter graduate or professional schools or to gain employment in their field.

Student Learning Outcomes

Students completing this program will gain:

- an understanding of the basic knowledge, concepts and critical theories of the major field: Hispanic literature, linguistics and culture
- critical thinking skills needed for generating and analyzing both literary and expository texts
- an ability to read, speak and write in Spanish
- writing and speaking skills needed to communicate effectively in a variety of professional settings
- an understanding and appreciation of cross-cultural issues.

This major program of study offers sound preparation for graduate study in literature, languages, linguistics, or writing. In addition, it is possible for a student to design a program to prepare for studying law, journalism, social sciences, communications or the medical profession.
